

ABSTRACT

A method of generating simulation reports regarding an integrated circuit layout is provided. The method can include providing a plurality of control points associated with the integrated circuit layout. A single simulation of the plurality of control points can be performed. Detailed information from the single simulation can be stored in a database. Desired information can then be extracted from the database to generate the simulation reports.